

Harness the potential of companies that care about how their business impacts the environment or the workplace. Today, the relationship with nature and people is not only addressed by smaller regional companies, but also by well-known global brands. Responsible behaviour is no longer an empty phrase, but a real measure in industrial production, agriculture or services, with impacts in all areas of human activity. With this fund, you invest in companies that follow strict rules of responsible behaviour. These companies, for example, are reducing the energy intensity of their own production or helping others to do so, increasing the share of renewable energy in the production process, purposefully minimising the impact of their production on water resources and the quality of drinking water, reduce the carbon footprint of their products and services, comply with the principles of organic farming or humane treatment of animals, and also respect human and labour rights or diversity and fight corruption.
